

Are There Any “Good Wars?”

On Veteran’s Day, history recalls a thousand excuses for war. Scarce resources, extension of empires, defense of homelands, defense of ideologies, the craving for conquest. But have there been any “good wars?” Millions dead, millions wounded, millions scarred, millions displaced. Historian Christopher Lovett and Jewish War Veterans past national commander Harvey Weiner join Edwin to take a hard look at the history, near term and far future prospects for man’s most inhumane undertaking.
